

I Have Changed

I think I have changed in many ways since I joined GirlsMatter. I mean, everyone would always hear teachers and people say "You can make a difference!" and I never really thought much of it. But now that I'm in GirlsMatter, it's like "Wow! I really can make a difference!" and its soooooo nice to know that and it gives me a new insight on things. 😊

What I like most about Girlsmatter is that I can connect with other girls and it makes me feel good about myself. I feel like I can change the world and make it better for women and people in general. I mean, look at Alice Paul; she wasn't just a one person team but she contributed a great deal to getting women the right to vote.

I think it is important for girls my age to be exposed to politics because we are a part of the future and we need to be informed about this stuff to be a part of our government. We need to have a say in the government. We already have the right to vote but not many people are exercising the right! The place we live in isn't just a "man's world" anymore.
