

REVOLUTION

We all want to change the world.... but how??

By Gracie

Though the famous Beatles hit “Revolution” came out in the 1960’s, some of its messages still remain true today after all those years. Written by John Lennon and Paul McCartney, the lyrics of this song portray the feelings of an individual who wishes to change something about their government or environment. The lyrics, “..we all wanna change the world”, still ring true. I think that everyone finds in their own personal experiences that many improvements can be made in our less-than-perfect world. However, these things will never get changed if someone doesn’t decide to speak up and take action. Taking action on an issue of importance can be difficult. Hopefully, through our program, many young girls will be able to develop the voice that is required to take action by participating in politics.

The Beatles show their disapproval of violence through the lyrics, “and when you talk about destruction, don’t you know that you can count me out....” These words once again remind us that the leaders who have led us onto the path of war are the ones we voted for. Our democracy is run by the people and if we have a voice strong enough to disagree with war and violence, then we should act strongly enough to help change that. Once you are able to hear your own ideas, share them with others, and finally act on them! There is no telling what kinds of amazing improvements this world will see. By taking action, not only can we change things that we think are wrong, such as war and destruction, but we can also improve the overall quality of life and government in our country. We can also inspire others to do the same.
